

4/17/05

Art Exhibition Committee: Amy McMenamin of Western Reserve Mortgage Chairman David Leopold of the Studio of Ben Solowey, Lauren Travis of Travis Ferrigan of Trimbur-Henry Gallery, Tom Sperling of Mixed Media Gallery, of The Graphic Edge, Daniel Anthonisen, artist, Gene W. Fickes of Deep Run Manchester of Manchester Commercial Services, Jill C. Yris, free lance writer, ivest National Bank and Trust Company and Gil Cohen, artist.

Young artist featured with the Old Masters

In "Treasures from the La Salle University Art Museum," the Bucks Fever exhibition at Travis Gallery through April 26 to, a young local artist is among the classical artists.

Among the drawings of such great masters as Rembrandt, Piranesi, Ingres, Daumier, Whistler and Miro, the drawing of 36-year-old artist Niko Chocheli, created in his late 20s, will be on display.

Art curators have compared "Study of Lily" by Chocheli to Leonardo da Vinci. It was created in 1997 while Chocheli was an artist in residence at La Salle University Art Museum. While there, he created a large scope of classical style drawings to educate students in the methods of Old Masters.

Chocheli, originally from the Republic of Georgia, moved to Bucks County 10 years ago.

The U.S. government awarded him with the status of Alien of Extraordinary Abilities. He has published six books with his illustrations, bringing him recognition worldwide. He holds an honorary professorship and an honorary doctorate in fine arts and has his own art school in Doylestown.

Travis Gallery is at 6089 Lower York Road. (Route. 202), Solebury Township.

applicant.

1 Today.—

Thanks to you.....

"Best Mexican"- AOL 2004 & 2005
City Guide Poll